My Love Ain't Meant For A Thug : The Beginning Of Us A'Zayler

“Promise to stay down until the come up...”

Late Nights and early mornings has always been the one thing Congo could depend on. He's been living his life on the grind for as long as he could remember. Dominating the streets, and every other small time hustler in quest of his position at the top. Showing no mercy to the men and disregarding the women Congo was on a power trip until the murder of his oldest brother. Everything he'd worked for came to a screeching halt and he's left with nothing. Now he's forced to live a regular life working a regular job. The dope game having always been his first love, he now has nothing left that's appealing to his heart.

A unique beauty dumbled down to nothing more than an extra source of income, Honey, is desperate and lost. She desires a way out of her current situation but with the only family she has locked away forever, she's all alone. Getting to the money day in and day out, Honey shuts herself away from any and everything not aiding in her success. Having been used and taken for granted in her past relationship, she's a little more resistant to the advances of the handsome young thug that's captivated her truest feelings. She's determined to ignore him and his efforts until there's no more reasons to run. Here in the moment with this totally perfect stranger Honey decides to give it a chance.

Both needing security and someone in their corner they embark on this new journey together. Struggling but determined to make it, Congo and Honey stick side by side, loving one another past their current situation. Believing in the visions he has for them and the passion filled relationship they've started, Honey promises to stay down until he makes it. Congo's life was going nowhere fast until his heart took to Honey, so now that he has her he's going above and beyond to show her that as much as she believes that it isn't, her love is indeed meant for a thug.
