Beneath the ice and crystal lies the future of mankind.

The entire population was sent to sleep in hibernation chambers underground so that the earth could re-grow. When Glenton wakes, it's to a shaking chamber and screams. He's saved by Aric, and together they rescue all those they can as the chambers suffocate the remaining humans.

Was it a horrible mistake or a cruel government? Six survivors now try to endure beneath the ice in what remains of the hibernation center, waiting for the day they can return to the surface. Glenton is among them, troubled by his strange feelings for Aric. When their home loses power, they must go to sleep once more.

The future of our species depends on their waking. Will they make it to the surface?
